TWO WILLS FILED

Both Executed and Signed by Mrs. Elizabeth Harris.

There were filed in the office of the register of wills late yesterday two wills of Mrs. Elizabeth W. Harris, one dated July 15, 1897, and the second October 24, 1898. In both testaments Mrs. Harris provides that Maxwell, shall have $500, and that the four children of another of her late husband's sisters, Kate Irwin, shall have $25 each. To the General Conference Association of the Seventh Day Adventists denomination she gives $2,000, to be used in missionary work among the freedmen of the south; to the Seventh Day Adventists' College at Walla Walla, Wash., she gives $250 in the first will, but this amount is reduced to $100 in the second; to her former pastor, Elder Allen Mocre, $100; to her niece, May Wilson, in the first will is given $3,000, but in the second this is changed so that the young lady shall receive $15 per month so long as she remains with the Seventh Day Adventists and unmarried. To her son Thoro she gives $500, while her personal property is to be divided among Thoro, her daughter Worthie and niece, May Wilson. Miss Worthie Harris is named as execu-in the advantages enjoyed by the entire in the advantages enjoyed by the entire community through the code as a whole. The first measure taken up this winter by the board for a public meeting should. I suggest, be the code, and I hope that the coming session of Congress may suffice to win for the District the blessings to flow from the adoption of the code, and to relieve the capital from the throttling burden of ancient laws now fastened upon its teck, like the Old Man of the See on the reck, like the Old Man of the Sea on the shoulders of Sinbad.

If success meets the movement, Judge

It success meets the movement, Judge Cox, in whom the whole community feels confidence, will have crowned a long life of public usefulness by a monumental labor which will bring untold benefit to the community, high and deserved honor to the codifier, and transform conditions surrounding listrict concerns into modern rounding District concerns into modern shape, conducive to the progress and prosperity of the nation's city.

Maintenance of the Organic Act.

Another feature of the legislative campaign for the District's welfare of vast importance is the constant struggle for the maintenance intact of the organic act. This principle will come into question at the approaching session in three ways:

1. In the extension of suburban streets. In amending the highway act at its last session, Congress repealed section 15 and thereby condemned the preposal embodied in the highway law to extend the grand national p an of the original city over the mistit subdivisions and unsubdivided land of the suburbs entirely at local expense. But hardly is the District rid of the recof the suburbs entirely at local expense. But hardly is the District rid of the per-nicious provisions of section 15 when legis-lation is proposed, in various bills, which will re-enact, plecemeal, in the case of successive single streets, the iniquitous principle of exclusive local contributions for suburban street condemnation and improvesuburban street condemnation and improvement which Corgress has just abolished in its application to the comprehensive extension of Washington's streets collectively.

2. The principle needs to be guarded in every appropriation which disburses the revenues of the District of Columbia.

3. The principle is brought in question by propositions to raise the standard of local tax assessment and to increase the District's burden of taxation.

Isse have taken so excellent a start: (a) Endowment and development of the public library; (b) the securing of more and better water and the defeat of meter projects which tend to limit the use and increase the cost of the water supply; (c) reciama-tion of the Anacostia flats; (d) development of manual training schools; (e) speedy pletion of comprehensive system of sewage disposal.

The City's Centennial.

Congress at the coming session will be asked by the President of the United States in his annual message to make legislative provision for the appointment of a commission, representing the House, Senate, the states of the Union, and the District of Columbia, to arrange an appropriate celebration in 1900 of the 100th anniversary of the establishment of the seat of govern-ment in Washington. This occasion, so in-teresting and so important both nationally and locally, deserves and will doubtiess receive the earnest and thoughtful attention of Congress, the nation's and the District's legislature. It may safely be assumed that the board of trade will be active, both in securing appropriate legislation in the matter and in contributing directly by its labors to the success of the enterprise. Looking Forward. The future upon which the capital is about to enter is one of brilliant promise. Reference has been made to the beneficial effect of the war with Spain upon Washington's business interests. This benefit is profounder and farther reaching than is usually imagined. It is not confined to the emporary increase of business in a few lines of local trade, due to the physical presence of many soldiers. The benefit is permanent and its causes are deep-rooted. nation, from which issues and circulates the life-giving element, permeating with national influence and power the whole of who wished to vote, but was unable to be the body politic. The greater the current of national life, the larger and stronger the heart, the muscle, which sends the re-public's life blood pulsing through its veins. As the body politic expands and puts forth its strength, the national heart grows in proportion. Thus Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines, in enlarging the republic and broadening the scope of national govern-ment, increase also the official machinery operated here, and develop the government's city.

The national capital is not only the heart. but the soul, of the nation, the peculiar abiding place of the spirit of nationality. The legends of every imaginative people deal in some fashion with the fancy of the interwoven fates of widely differing individuals, of a crossing of life lines between them, so that the prosperity or adversity, the sickness or death of one of the affin ities is faithfully reflected and reproduced in the other, however separated in space, in age or conditions of life they may be The republic and its capital, the city created, largely owned and exclusively controlled by the nation, are such affinities. Their common life line is the national patriotic sentiment. Strengthen the spirit of American nationality and the nation waxes stronger, and the capital responds with corresponding growth. Wound the sentiment of nationality and both capital and nation languish; destroy it and they die. As blood of martyrs is the seed of the As blood of martyrs is the seed of the church, so blood of the patriots is the seed of American national sentiment and of the national capital which embodies this sentiment. The bloodshed of the revolution created the federal Union and the capital.

The bloodshed of the civil war developed a nation and a national city. The bloodshed of the war with Spain washes out all traces of the civil struggle, reunites the national elements, expands and promotes national elements, expands and promotes the nation and the nation's city.

For the new America there is to be a new Washington. There can be no genuine expansion of the republic which does not show forth as in an index in the republic's city. So, likewise, prosperity in the federal district means that the whole nation proslistrict means that the whole nation prospers and develops more and more from day to day. Their life lines being interday to day. Their life lines being inter-woven no one may savagely cut at one without injury to the other; and he who fosters the one builds up the other, and in a two-fold capacity meets the requirements and enjoys the patriotic privileges of a loyal and enthusiastic American.

A Vote of Thanks.

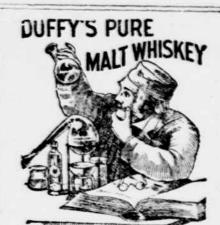

After the applause which followed the conclusion of the reading had subsided, Mr. B. H. Warner moved that a vote of thanks be extended to President Noyes for the most able annual report, as he expressed it, that had ever been heard in the history of the board. He also moved that a special vote of thanks be extended to Mr. Noyes vote of thanks be extended to Mr. or the efficient services rendered by him the board.

The motion was unanimously adopted, and Mr. Warner announced the result to Mr. Noyes, who expressed his thanks. Secretary's Exhibit.

The report for the secretary's office was then read by the acting secretary. Mr. Arthur O'Neill, and was in part as follows: "The present illness of the secretary, Col. George H. Harries, the circumstances leading up to which are well known to the members of the board of trade, devolves upon me the duty of submitting a brief report relative to the work of the secrereport relative to the work of the secretary's office during the official year just closed. The membership of the board at the last annual meeting was 405, of whom 357 were in good standing, and the number admitted during the year was 161. It is gratifying to be able to report a net increase of more than 60 in the membership of the board as compared with that at the close of last year, the present number on the rolls being 462, several of whom, I regret to say, are in arrears for dues. It is hoped, however, that these arrearages will soon be settled. oon be settled.

"While, as already stated, the past year has witnessed an increase in our member-ship, due to the energy and the intelligent saip, due to the energy and the intelligent efforts of the secretary and the member-ship committee, the fact is that the national capital should furnish at least twice as many citizens willing and even anxious to take upon themselves the duties which properly belong to members of the board of trade. As pointed out in the report of the secretary a year ago, a membership of 1,000 in the board of trade would not be out of proportion in the least for the city of Washington if many much smaller towns and cities of the country be assumed a basis for comparison. The expense connected with membership is certainly most reasonable, being but $10 per year, this amount including the initiation fee of new members, under a provision of the by-law adopted a year ago.

Membership of Committees.

"Since the last annual meeting steps have been taken toward securing a more complete representation on committees of the membership of the board of trade, with the result that those now serving on the several committees aggregate 317, or about three-fourths of all on our rolls. A new committee was created during the year, namely, on mercantile interests, to which are intrusted all matters affecting or likely to affect the mercantile interests of the District. The transportation committee, formerly merged with that on commerce and manufacture, was revived, its duties being substantially those which pertained to it during its previous existence.

"The period covered by this report has been one of unusual activity for the board

-a greater number of meetings having been held than in any previous years of its his-tory. There were six board of trade meetings, fifteen meetings of the board of diectors and seventy-three meetings of standing and special committees. The board rooms have frequently been placed at the disposal of various local organizations and used for their meetings.

"The national capital has not falled to sustain its reputation as the convention city, many assemblies of representatives of various organizations having been held here during the year, notably the National Board of Trade, National Pure Food and Drug Congress, the Episcopal General Convention and the National Educational Association. Mr. W. J.
